A major expansion is taking place at a popular fishing lodge in Labrador. The Igloo Lake Lodge is known for catches of some of the largest brook trout anywhere in the world. The lodge is located 72 miles southeast of Goose Bay on the Eagle River and is accessible only by float plane. Owner, Jim Burton, says Igloo Lake Lodge is under going a major expansion, with a new addition to the existing facility. He noted the new addition will offer more bedrooms, bathrooms, and a special room for corporations to do training and presentations. Burton says a number of companies have expressed interest in using the lodge as a retreat for team building. He stated this summer has been very successful and Igloo Lake Lodge currently holds an International Fish Game Association world record for the largest brook trout.
